

Seminar on Green Environment Energy Saving – Green Professional Certification Program

(Seminar Series 1)

How to Equip Yourselves for A Green Future

With the emerging challenges arising from global warming, pollution and landfill-related environmental problems, there is an imminent need for the building sector in Hong Kong - consisting of massive energy consumers, to focus more efforts and resources into evolving Hong Kong into a greener and smarter built-up environment. Green professionals and building associations have taken the lead to educate the community and to develop the industry with commitments and intelligent solutions. This seminar aims to raise the awareness of the industry that environmental evolvement is necessary by providing updated information on professional standards and related knowledge domains and by equipping industry practitioners with a complete and clear understanding of professional development and certification schemes.

This seminar is ideal for architects, project managers, facility managers, green building consultants, developers, sustainability coordinators, landscape architects, technical managers, energy engineers, MEP consultants, and anyone interested in understanding green and intelligent building principles, especially sustainable design, construction, management, purchasing, and plans to further the green evolution.
