The world was changing at a considerable pace well before the COVID-19 outbreak. The global pandemic has accelerated and intensified some of those changes, escalated doubt and concern about the ‘old normal’ and driven calls for a green recovery and a better future for all – a common vision that embraces sustainability, resilience, equity, diversity, and one where people can live well and within planetary boundaries.

As the world has changed, so must business leadership.

This conference aims to support BEC members and the wider business community to redefine business leadership for long-term business sustainability. Specifically, the conference will (a) help identify megatrends and set new priorities for businesses in face of the emerging risks and challenges under the ‘new normal’, and (b) discuss how business leaders can successfully navigate these risks and challenges through mindset shift, system transformation and the creation of shared value.
